Dear Parishioners,

Advent is the one Liturgical season which seems to have broad appeal. It is short, and the payoff is long on good feelings. Even the constant rainfall and snow removal are all part what makes this time so special. Hence as we come to the second week of Advent, the word of God bring us back to the real meaning of this season—preparation for the birth of Jesus.

In today's gospel reading, we encounter one of those towering Advent figures, John the Baptist. John is assigned a tough task ~ "A voice crying in the desert, prepare the of the Lord, make his paths straight!" How is John going to accomplish this heralding task? Again, not in an easy way. John must call the people to repentance and conversation so as to ready their hearts for the birth of the Saviour. We all know how popular such messages are. We also know what usually happens to those who bring the challenge to change.

Today, we are called to listen to the voice of John the Baptist. This message of conversion is also for us because the need to change, to reform our lives is not frozen in time. Today's message is timeless and timely. Advent therefore is a time to prepare for the birth of Jesus. It is a time of homecoming, God's nearness and conversion.

At times, we can seem so far away from God. We are well aware of our sins and shortcomings. We know well how far we have travelled in search of meaning and truth. It is easy to feel that God has abandoned us, since we in fact have turned away from him. Yet in the midst of our personal exile, He comes to rescue us. Our God is not a God of vengeance, but of Love. God wants us to come back to him. For only in him can we experience a comfort and peace beyond all telling. Our God is like a shepherd tending his flock and coming for the most in need with tenderness beyond human comprehension. God desires to heal and make whole all the brokenness of this. This is the reason why he became man for us and for our salvation.

This coming week, our parish will be celebrating Simbang Gabi starting on Friday, Dec 15 with 7pm Mass at Good Shepherd Church (for 9 consecutive days). Last year was the first time our parish celebrated Simbang Gabi, so I know this year it will be even bigger and better! Everyone is welcome.

I also bring your attention to our Parish Seniors Luncheon on Wednesday, December 20th followed by the Christmas Presentation by all the students of Star of the Sea School. I hear that this was a tradition for many years, but it had stopped after 2019 due to covid. This is the first year it's back, and I'm pleased that it has returned. It will be a very special event for our parish seniors hosted by our Parish Education Committee (PEC) and served by our Grade 7 students. Please note that day the morning Mass will be at 10:30am (instead of 9am), followed by the luncheon served at 11:30am. The Christmas performance is at 1pm in the School Gym. There are some tickets left in the Parish Office—so please stop by this week to get yours. Tickets are only $5.00 and includes a delicious lunch, Christmas treats and the Christmas presentation.

Fr. Augustine

This Sunday's Mass Readings:

Reading 1: Isaiah 40:1–5, 9–11

Psalm: Psalm 85:9–14

Reading 2: 2 Peter 3:8–14

Gospel: Mark 1:1–8

The Second Sunday in the Season of Advent for Year B shifts our focus from the final advent, or second coming of Christ at the end of time, to the first advent of Jesus by bringing us back to the very beginning of the Gospel of Mark. Unlike Matthew and Luke who both begin their Gospels with the infancy of Christ, Mark goes straight into the public ministry of Jesus and its preparation in the figure of John the Baptist — who is a very prominent figure during the Advent season because John is the precursor or the forerunner to Christ; he's the one who comes and announces Jesus in advance.

Pondering John the Baptist with Bishop Barron: <https://www.wordonfire.org>

“One of my favorite places on earth is the great Cathedral of Chartres in Paris...Chartres is famous, of course, for its transcendentally beautiful stained glass, but it also boasts hundreds of exquisitely rendered sculptures of biblical figures. On the north porch of the cathedral, there is a statue depicting John the Baptist, and it shows him as an emaciated figure (after all, the Bible tells us that he ate locusts and wild honey) holding an image of the Lamb of God. But what is most striking about the sculpture is the face of the Baptist. He bears an expression that bespeaks an aching, a longing, a looking toward something that he does not have but wants. Some of the saints that surround Chartres Cathedral seem blissful, already in possession of the great good for which they longed. But not John the Baptist. He yearns, pines, hungers still.

And this makes him, par excellence, a saint of Advent. This holy season, of course, calls to mind the coming (adventus) of Jesus in history, but it also anticipates the arrival of the Lord at the culmination of the age, that time when, as St. Paul puts it, Christ will be “all in all” (1 Cor. 15:28). This fulfillment, obviously enough, has not yet happened, for the world is still plagued by wars, famine, floods, earthquakes, and pandemics. And our lives are still marked by depression, failure, sin, and frustrated plans. None of this tells against the fact that God’s creation is good, but it does indeed confirm the intuition that this life is, as the Salve Regina puts it, “a vale of tears.” All of us, therefore, wear the expression of the John the Baptist of Chartres: craving an absent good.

Might I suggest some practices for all of us Advent people during these upcoming weeks? First, we should deepen our lives of prayer. As John of Damascus told us long ago, to pray is to “raise the mind and the heart to God.” It is to be consciously aware of God, present to him. Even if we wear a somewhat anguished expression as we do so, we should turn our faces purposely to God, and as we pray, we should allow our yearning for God to surface. C.S. Lewis told us that the aching of the heart for God—and it is a real suffering—is properly called “joy.” Prayer, in a way, is the cultivation of precisely that sublime form of joy. One of the very best ways to practice this form of spiritual attention is to spend an uninterrupted hour or half hour in the presence of the Blessed Sacrament.

A second Advent suggestion is this: wear the world lightly. The reason that we feel spiritual anguish is that the deepest desire of our heart cannot be met by any merely worldly good. We look to something beyond our ken and capacity precisely because we realize, consciously or unconsciously, that the hungry soul cannot be satisfied by any amount of esteem, riches, power, or pleasure. The attainment of any of these goods produces a momentary bliss followed by a letdown, a disappointment. But this truth mustn't be allowed to depress us; rather, it should compel us to adopt the spiritual stance that the spiritual masters call "detachment." This means enjoying wealth and then letting it go; using power for good but not clinging to it; taking in honor and not caring a whit for it. It is to adopt the attitude that St. Ignatius of Loyola calls "indifference." Advent is a privileged time to practice this virtue.

A third and final suggestion is this: we should devote ourselves to doing one of the corporal works of mercy. These acts—feeding the hungry, giving drink to the thirsty, clothing the naked, visiting the imprisoned, etc.—are concrete acts of love. It is easy enough for religious people to speak of love in an abstract manner, but to love means to will the good of the other. Therefore, it is dense, real, particular, something that shows up. And heaven—that ultimate joy that we long for—is nothing other than love, love in the fullest possible sense, love without limit. Aquinas says that in heaven, faith will fade away (since we will see God face to face) and hope will disappear (since we would have attained what we hoped for), but love will remain (since heaven is love). So, when we love someone here below, in even the simplest way, we anticipate our return to the homeland, we stir our craving for heaven.

So, as we move into the spiritual space of John the Baptist in this season of Advent, we should pray, we should let go, and we should perform the works of mercy.
